Thank You for a Transformational Year

As a young organization with a vision for state parks and public lands that are welcoming, inclusive and climate resilient spaces, 2020 was a year of growth in every sense of the word. Beginning with our partnership with California State Parks, our shared priorities have multiplied our efforts to increase equitable access to California parks, build lifelong park stewards, and lay the groundwork to launch programs that welcome new and returning visitors. In addition, the many impacts of the international COVID-19 pandemic, have only deepened our commitment to ensuring the long-term health and wellbeing of California’s communities and the state park system. Our work continues to remain centered in these truths and the opportunities ahead to bloom, together.

“From supporting access, to online programming, raising funds for wildfire relief, assisting in our natural resources efforts and getting the park stories out into the world, successful and momentum-building efforts defined the trajectory of the State Parks and Parks California partnership.”

Armando Quintero
Director, California State Parks

2020 Milestones

We believe that all people deserve the opportunity to build meaningful, lifelong connections to nature in a way that matters most to them. (If you felt like this was a little more difficult this year, you’re not alone.) We worked with various partners and communities to connect thousands of people from all across California with state parks in 2020 in new and innovative ways.

Route to Parks awarded funds to 20 grantees
from outdoor educational organizations to traditional park friends' groups – with $319,388 provided to connect 9,000 people to California State Parks.

passPORTS pilot program will bring 4,250 students
to California State parks through blended access field trips over a two-year period with transportation programs for Title I schools.

Parks Online Resources for Teachers and Students (PORTS) provided over $56,000 in technology
and equipment (including tablet computers, tripods, lighting and microphones) to expand live park programming, connected over 170,000 students in classrooms and at home last year to the state’s 280 parks.

COVID-19 Response Grants awarded $29,400 in grants
to 60 state park partners, with 38 additional grants made possible in partnership with California League of Park Associations (CALPA).
COVID-19, as well as a broadened focus on the impacts of climate change and systemic racial injustice, elevated the importance of highlighting the public value of our state parks and investing in the protection of our environment—and subsequently our collective futures.

ParkSpeak virtual conversations featured partners and guest speakers to highlight Sumeg Village in Patrick’s Point State Park, La Purisima Mission State Historic Park and the Anza-Borrego Desert State Park.

Wildfire Relief Fund supported the short and long-term wildfire recovery and resilience of California State Parks with proceeds from a live virtual concert hosted in partnership with Stagelt.

Natural Resource Stewardship provided professionals with job training and tools, career pathways and regional partnerships to build State Parks’ capacity to meet its resource stewardship and climate resilience goals.

Thank You, Donors!

Our trusted community partners were integral in reimagining the outdoors experience in 2020. To our supporters—your generosity helps strengthen parks and inspire all to experience these extraordinary places. Thank you.
